To whom it may concern:

Breandan Considine of McGill University has been accepted to participate in the Oregon Programming Languages Summer School to be held June 20-July 2, 2022 in Eugene Oregon at the University of Oregon campus. The program consists of talks from researchers in the field of programming languages, and opportunities to form an international research cohort including students, professors and industry professionals.

The Oregon Programming Languages Summer School is a scientific conference that awards no academic credit. The participants are neither assessed on participation nor awarded any certificate of completion. Breandan Considine is receiving a grant from OPLSS sponsors to partially cover the cost of attending OPLSS.
